

Record of discussion on the ‘Sensitisation of Departments’ held on 01.09.2025 for the head and nominees from each of the five identified departments under the Capacity Building on Specific Learning Disabilities (SLDs) – Cycle 4, for 29 Higher Education Institutes

An online session – Sensitisation of Departments was organised on 01.09.2025 by the Department of Higher Education, Ministry of Education, in collaboration with NIEPA and ChangeInkk Foundation as the Resource Partner. This session marked the Second Phase of Cycle 4 of Capacity Building on Specific Learning Disabilities (CBSLDs) under the Malaviya Mission Teacher Training Programme(MMTTP) and was aimed at sensitising participants on fostering inclusion of students with learning disabilities in Higher Education Institutions. The discussions highlighted the collective role of different departments in creating a facilitative and enabling environment for students with SLDs. The session was attended by representative of the Admission Department, Office of Student-life/Campus-life Affairs, Office of Academic Affairs, Faculty and Examinations Cell, IT Department, and Career & Placement Cell from the identified Higher Education Institutions, and featured an interactive session conducted by the resource person from the ChangeInkk Foundation, with participation of 272 faculty and non-faculty representing 29 Higher Education Institutions; the list of participants is enclosed in Annexure 1.

2. Mr. Devendra Kumar Sharma, Director DoHE, welcomed the participants. He put forward a brief background on the MMTTP, under which the CBSLD program has been launched, highlighting its aim of strengthening faculty capacities across HEIs in India. So far, 2.5 lakh+ faculty members have been trained under 16 different programs, ranging from Artificial Intelligence, mental health, leadership, cyber security, etc. Focusing on the CBSLD, he underscored the importance of inclusive education as mandated by the RPWD Act 2016 and the National Education Policy 2020, which call for educational environments to adapt and cater to all students, including those with disabilities such as SLDs. Stressing the need to sensitise faculty to effectively address the requirements of such students, he noted that the program has completed three cycles and is currently in its fourth cycle, and also shared the schedule of the forthcoming sessions under this phase.

3. Prof. Kumar Suresh, NIEPA, highlighted that while the RPWD Act (2016) and UGC’s Accessibility Guidelines Standards for Higher Education Institutions and Universities(2022) mandate inclusive education for all forms of disabilities, Specific Learning Disabilities (SLDs) have often received less attention compared to physical, visual, or hearing impairments in higher education institutions. He emphasised that the program aims to help build critical awareness and capacity to address invisible disabilities like SLDs. Stressing the alignment of this initiative with the focus of National Education Policy 2020 on equity and inclusion, he expressed confidence that with active participation and commitment, higher education institutions would be able to create an enabling ecosystem for students with SLDs.

4. Ms. Aparajita Singh from the ChangeInkk Foundation gave an interactive and insightful session on unlocking the potential of students with Specific Learning Disabilities (SLDs) and the importance of translating policies into concrete institutional practices. Drawing from her own lived experience as person with SLD, she emphasised the need to sensitise institutions to recognise invisible disabilities. She highlighted that while globally one in five people may have an SLD, only a fraction are ever identified, resulting in lost educational and economic opportunities. In her presentation she noted data that while more than 200 million Indians could be living with learning disabilities, fewer than 10 million have actually been diagnosed, resulting in a significant economic loss. Projections indicate that by 2030, nearly 30% of the workforce may comprise individuals with learning disabilities, and fostering inclusive practices could contribute to a 1% rise in the national GDP. She explained that conditions such as dyslexia, dyscalculia, and dysgraphia affect literacy, numeracy, and motor skills, but emphasised that these are not indicators of low intelligence. In fact, students with SLDs usually have average or above-average IQ and possess unique strengths in areas like creativity, problem solving, visualisation, and innovation, which align with 21st-century competencies. To illustrate this, she highlighted examples of globally recognised innovators, entrepreneurs, and leaders who themselves have SLDs and whose contributions have had a transformative impact across industries. She underlined the struggles students face with disclosure and self-advocacy, fearing bullying, rejection, and isolation from peers. Students with SLD also find it difficult to manage daily tasks independently, cope with academic pressures like reading, writing, note-taking, and balancing classroom work with other college demands, which can lead to low self-esteem, anxiety, and overwhelming stress in new environments.

5. Ms. Singh highlighted the significance of the RPWD Act 2016, NEP 2020, and guidelines issued by UGC, AICTE, and NTA in mandating inclusive education and called upon HEIs to embed these principles into their institutions' structures and culture. The presentation outlined a comprehensive framework for inclusion in HEIs, covering admissions, academic support, campus life, access to resources and employment opportunities. This framework should be supported by measures such as counselling services, use of assistive technologies, buddy and mentorship systems, and systematic capacity building of faculty to ensure sustained impact. She concluded by urging institutions to recognise that students with SLDs are not defined by their challenges but by their potential, and with the right awareness, sensitivity, and institutional mechanisms, HEIs can create truly inclusive ecosystems that enable these students to thrive academically, socially, and professionally.

6. Following the presentation, the resource persons addressed several questions around career counselling and placement challenges for differently-abled students, psychometric tests, issues of admissions, attendance, and SOPs for students with disabilities in technical courses, etc.

7. Mr. Devendra Kumar Sharma, Director, Department of Higher Education, outlined the next phase of the program - 'Master Classes for Department', which will be held separately for the five identified departments of an institute to support matters specific to their department on learning disabilities. Additionally, he shared the resources available for the program on the Malaviya Mission Teacher Training Programme website, which can be accessed through the link:
